Monthly Commentary

The Trium Multi-Strategy UCITS Fund ended 2025 up +10.8% (N USD), achieving a return of +6.5% in excess of the return from investing in cash (Fed Funds) over the year (4.3%). Given the annualised volatility of 3.3% last year, the Fund achieved a Sharpe Ratio of 2.0 in 2025..

In December, a generally strong month was enjoyed by markets. This helped hedge funds with directionality/correlation to markets to have a strong month, too. Our fund is specifically designed to seek to generate strong risk-adjusted returns independent of market directionality. Each of our 10 strategies implements its own distinct investment process seeking uncorrelated returns – returns are explained by alpha, not beta. In December, however, the positive and negative alpha cancelled itself out, and the Fund recorded a -0.2% return for the month.

A very good way to compound wealth over a long period is to avoid drawdowns. We all know that climbing out of a drawdown requires a greater magnitude of percentage gains than those that lead to a loss: a -25% drawdown requires +33.3% return (which may take several years) to restore capital, while a -33.3% requires +50%. As Warren Buffett famously put it: "The first rule of investment is 'Don't lose money' and the second rule is: 'Never forget Rule No. 1.'"

We can't claim to be Warren Buffett. That having been said, we are pleased that our down months are few in number and shallow in nature. December took the number of negative months in 2025, from 1 to 2, and the number of down months in the past two years from 2 to just 3. However, what has been particularly reassuring is the shallowness of these drawdowns: -0.4% (June 2024), -0.1% (March 2025), and -0.2% (December 2025).

I am pleased, but not surprised, by this. The 10 strategies we draw on have Investment teams with extensive experience seeking to manage downside risk. Each strategy has a Beta close to zero, and each one is seeking alpha in distinct and different parts of the investment universe – diversified by strategy and style.

Global Macro

Our discretionary macro strategy, with a more thematic approach, the Trium Epynt Macro strategy, wins the prize for the highest-performing strategy in 2025. Please see the following link for more information on this compelling strategy. The strategy was up again in December benefitting from long exposure to Platinum group miners, Gold, and Silver, with profits being taken during the month as these metals appreciated very strongly. The strategy is becoming more active in LatAm and expects positioning to grow in 2026. The strategy is also active in China, where it is positioned for higher interest rates.

Our Systematic Macro RV strategy, having been the biggest contributor to the Macro cluster in November, was its biggest detractor in December. VIX long volatility positioning detracted as benign market conditions prevailed, and negative returns from other Macro RV strategies implemented with futures further detracted.

Our Portfolio Manager employing structural alpha trades seeking to set up asymmetric trades with a propensity to perform strongly in sharp sell-offs ("Tail Risk") got no support from the pro-risk market and other diversifying portfolio positions did not help so the strategy was down this month

Our discretionary trading-oriented macro strategy, which has a long volatility portfolio construction, also suffered in the benign market environment. EM and European high-yield credit protection positions and idiosyncratic long exposure in China were the main detractors, while EM sovereign bonds somewhat dampened losses. Long positions in Venezuela bonds, mainly State-owned PDVSA, which have been appreciating with the greater focus being applied by the country under Donald Trump, took a pause this month. The position is being held in expectation of further US pressure on the regime.

Equity Market Neutral

Our discretionary catalyst-driven EMN strategy concluded the year with another positive month, benefitting as well-researched stocks that are under the radar of most sell-side Analysts appreciated. Its contribution was held back by its hedge book, which seeks to dampen market and factor risk. However, it was pleasing to see that in a rising market, its well-diversified Alpha Short book cost the strategy less than short Index/Industry baskets would have done, demonstrating the short alpha contribution from this part of the strategy.

Our discretionary EMN strategy, which focuses on industries most affected by energy-transition and in identifying companies that are "improvers", with the ability to generate profits while reducing their carbon and other emissions, was flat in December, following a very strong run over the prior 8 months. The PM believes 2026 will continue to provide rich opportunities for the strategy. He expects even greater dispersion between different stocks in the same industry as they seek to adapt to more onerous regulatory requirements on carbon emissions, in particular.

Meanwhile, the discretionary EMN strategy, which focuses on generating alpha from stocks already in the broad green economy, was slightly down. The strategy generated positive returns from companies, including a Belgian chemicals company that rallied as its recycling business benefits from higher precious metals prices and a German-listed wind turbine manufacturer, which continued to grow its order backlog in both Germany and internationally. These gains were offset by losses from positions including a USA-listed insulation installer, which dropped in December after a strong run in November due to continuing warnings on slowing residential construction. This position is being maintained as the company has been able to rapidly lower its cost base and add scale through acquisitions, which has steadied its earnings outlook. Another detractor was a Japanese industrial company, which declined in December after a strong November due to global concern about electronics demand and rising Japanese interest rates. The PM is hedging some of the factor risks associated with such positions.

Our quantitative EMN strategy again performed strongly, with its 11th up month out of 12 this year. Many models that were positive in November were up again in December, indicating model performance persistence. The Quantamental model group was up again on the back of the strong rewards for valuation characteristics (while Quality was again penalised). Stock Persistence and Stock Sentiment were up again as markets continued to reward stocks' and analysts' information. Variable bias continued to perform as a result of the strength of the long book alpha in addition to the positive market in Europe. Statistical Arbitrage was slightly up. News Arbitrage and Beta Arbitrage were slightly down, but did not significantly detract from performance.

The strategy, which is available in Daily Dealing UCITS, merits a particular mention. It has been annualising at ~Cash +8% over its >12 years' track record. In 2025, it achieved a very impressive Sharpe ratio of 2.7. More information may be found here.

Arbitrage Strategies

Our hard-catalyst Merger Arbitrage benefited from several positive catalysts in December on both the long and the short side. These were the primary drivers of performance as spread levels remain stable. Winners include a short position in a Healthcare deal that broke during the month and a long position in a Japanese beauty and body care products manufacturer, which received a competing offer during the month. The only detractor of note was a position in an Australian-listed pharmaceutical company deal that broke in November, in which we retain a small position. The M&A environment continued to be very strong despite a traditionally slower seasonal month, and the Portfolio Manager continues to be very positive on the global opportunity set.

Our Convertible Bond Arbitrage strategy was the largest detractor for our fund this month, mainly driven by continued negative performance from two companies linked to US data centres, where the movement of the convertible bonds and their reference equities saw sizeable and erratic moves. This strategy generally likes volatility. The Portfolio Manager is usually able to extract alpha by gamma trading as the delta of the short equity position moves, but as December illustrated: "You can have too much of a good thing".

Reflections on 2025 and Outlook for 2026

Thank you to our Investors

I would like to convey my thanks to our growing Investor base. AUM in our fund almost doubled over the year. As we approach the Fund's 3rd anniversary on March 10th, we are happy to see a very high-quality pipeline of imminent new investors.

Thank you to each of the members of our 10 investment teams

My principal thanks, though, is to our 10 Investment teams. Talent is key. We are very fortunate to have such a talented team of Portfolio Managers and Analysts. It makes the job of portfolio construction and risk management a relatively straight-forward one.

Thank you to the Multi-Strategy Committee and Multi-Strategy Team

Thank you to my fellow-members of the Trium Multi-Strategy Committee, and our dedicated Multi-Strategy Analyst, who have been an integral part of us comfortably exceeding our ambitious Cash +5% return target, while realising shallow drawdowns.

I am glad to be able to say that our active portfolio management decisions, as we dynamically managed allocation leverage, tilted toward certain strategies and underweighted others, as opportunity-sets evolved over the year, have again added significantly to Fund returns this year.

Thank you to all our other Trium colleagues

My thanks go to all our other Trium colleagues, including our Risk & Data team, our Treasury and Operations team, our Sales & IR team, our Trading team, the Trium Ireland UCITS team, and our broader support teams. Finally, a thank you to our Fund Directors, financing and trading partners, Fund Administrator and Custodian, who have provided very robust and reliable services again this year.

Outlook for 2026

The Fund is very well positioned to continue delivering this profile of returns, given its well-diversified talented Investment teams, with very low levels of cross-correlation, resulting from the structurally differentiated risk factors of its distinct strategies.

We will again be working hard in 2026 to seek to deliver returns of +5% or more in excess of the Risk-Free Rate/Cash, with the goal of again doing so with low volatility and relatively shallow drawdowns, enabling the fund to achieve a Sharpe Ratio of >1.5 again in 2026.

Please note more information on the strategies contributing to the Trium Multi-Strategy UCITS Fund, including more detailed information on the performance drivers over the month and the Portfolio Managers' outlook for their strategies, may be found in the Monthly Newsletters for the respective strategies.

More information in relation to risks in general may be found in the "Investment Risks and Special Considerations" section of the prospectus. The fund may use leverage. The use of leverage creates special risks and may significantly increase the fund's investment risk. Leverage creates an opportunity for greater yield and total return but, at the same time, exposes the fund to greater capital risk than an unlevered vehicle.
